Dear Brothers and Sisters,

Many people tend to define and evaluate others (and themselves) in terms of their job, wealth, house, looks, or education. But these things are of no significance whatsoever to God: true value lies in the human being behind the facade. The mistake that the apostles make in today's Gospel is to put social standing first - in their eyes the greatest was the one who had the highest position. Each wanted to get to the top in Jesus' kingdom. But Jesus told them yet again, that that his kingdom was not about seeking honour and glory for oneself, but about serving others.

If you were to list those in our world to whom society effectively accords no status or dignity, it would be a very long list indeed. Many of us in our parishes have been greatly blessed. Much has been given to us in life, and the Gospel demands that we give much to others in return. God entrusts us to use whatever wealth, skills, abilities, and time that we have, as the servants of all. Everyone can and ought to see a true calling from God in their vocation and obligations in life; to do good, to improve the world in which we live, and to correct the abuses and selfishness we encounter.

God Bless ..... Fr. Wilfred Pereppadan SCJ

“Besides, we know that approximately a third of all food produced is discarded, and “whenever food is thrown out it is as if it were stolen from the table of the poor”.[29]”
